REV. DR. TALMAGE'S SUNDAY DIS-COURSE AT THE TABERNACLE.

The Brooklyn Divine Talks on the Moral Effect of Free Masonry, Odd Fellowship, Knights of Labor, and Other Societies Secret in Their Nature

BROOKLYN, Apr. 17.—The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., announced to his congrega-tion to-day that as the Brooklyn Tabernacle has been uncomfortably crowded for many years the trustees have purchased the adjoin-ing ground, on which a great church, prayer and Sunday school room will be built, which on Sabbaths can be opened into the main audi-torium, thus giving room for at least a thou-sand more hearers at services. Six thousand people are crowded into the present building, 4,650 of these in pews and about 1,500 scated in aisles and standing. The improvement will add grestly to this capacity.

The subject of Dr. Talmage's sermon to day was, "What is the Moral Effect of Free Masonry, Odd Fellowship, Knightof Labor, Greek Alphabet, and Other Societies," The taxt was from Proverbs, xxv, 9; "Discover not a secret to another," Dr. Talmage said:

It appears that in Solomon's time, as in all subsequent periods of the world, there were people too much disposed to tell all they knew. It was blab, blab, blab—physicians revealing the case of their patients, lawyers exposing the private affairs of their clients, neighbors advertising the faults of the next door resident, pretended friends betraying confidences. One-half of the trouble of every community comes from the fact that so many people have not capacity to keep their mouths shut. When I hear something disparaging of you my first duty is not to tell you. But if I tell you what somebody has said against you, and then go out and tell everybody else what I told you, and they go out and tell others what I told them that I told you, and we all go out, some to hunt up the originator of the story and others to hunt it down, we shall get the whole community talking about what you did do and what you did not do, and there will be as many scalps taken as though a band of Modocc had swept upon a helpless village. We have two cars, but only one tongue—a physiological suggestion that we ought to hear a good deal more than we tell. Let us join a conspiracy that we will tell each other all the good and nothing of the Ill, and then there will not be such awful need of sermons on Bolomon's words: "Discover not a secret to another."

Solomon had a very large domestic circle. In his earlier days he had very confised notions about monogamy and polygamy, and his multitudinous associates in the matrimolial state kept him too well informed as to what was going on in Jerusalem. They gathered up all the privacies of the city and poured them into his dear, and his family became a Sorosis, or female debating society of 700, discussing day after day all whether associations that do their work with clased doors and admit their members by passwords and greet each other with a secret grip are right or wrong. I answer that it depends entirely on the neure of the object for which they meet. Is it to pass the hours in revelry, wassait, blesphemy, and obscene talk, or to plot trouble to the state, or to debauch the innocent? Then I say with an emphasis that no man can mistake, "No:" But is the object the defense of the rights of any class against oppression, the improvement of the mind, the enlargement of the heart, the advancement of art, the defense of the government, the extripation of crime, or the kindling of a purchearted sociality? Then I say, with just as much emphasis, "Yes."

There is no need that we who plan for the conquest of right over wrong should publish to all the world our intentions. The general of an army never sends to the opposing troops information of the coming attack. Shall we who have enlisted in the cause of God and humanity expose our plans to the enemy! No! we will in secret plot the ruin of all the enterprises of Satan and his cohorts. When they expect us by day we will fall upon them by night. While they are strengthening their left wing we will double up their right. By a plan of battle formed in secret onclave we will come suddenly upon them crying: "The sword of the Lord anof Gideon." Secrecy of plot and execution are wrong only when the object and ends are nefarious. Every family is a secre society, every business firm and every banking and insurance institution. Those men who have no capacity to keep a secret and ends are nefarious as well as a time to speak.

Although not belonging to any of the great secret societies about which there has been so

Although not belonging to any of the great secret societies about which there has been so much violent discussion, I have only words of praise for those associations which have for their object the maintenance of right against wrong, or the reclamation of insbriates, or, tike the score of mutual benefit societies called by different names, that provide temporary relief for widows and orphans, and for men incapacitated by sickness or accident from earning a livelihood. Had it not been for the large number of secret labor organizations in this country monopoly would long ago have, under its ponderous wheels, ground the laboring classes into an intolerable servitude. The men who want the whole earth to themselves would have got it before this had it not been for the handing together of great secret organizations. And, while we deplore many things that have been done by them, their existence is a necessity, and their legitimate sphere distinctly pointed out by the providence of God. Such organizations are trying to dismiss from their association all members in favor of anarchy and social chaos. They will gradually cease anything like tyranny over their members, and will forbid violent interference with any man's work, whether he belongs to their union or is outside of it, and will declare their disgust with any such rule as that passed in England by the Manchester Bricklayers' Association, which says any man found running or working beyond a regular speed shall be fined two shillings and its pence for the first disease, five shillings for the recond, ten shillings for the third, and if still perisiting shall be deatt with as the committee think proper. There are secret societies in our colleges that have letters of the Greek alphabet for their nomeaclature, and they gamble, and they drink, and they graduate, knowing a hundred times more about sin than they do of geometry and sophocase. In other words, secret societies, like individuals, are good or bad, are the means of moral health or of temporal and eternal damna men. A bad man will not stay in a good society. A good man will not stay in a bad society. Then try all secret societies by two or three rules.

Test the first; their influence on home, if they have a home. That wife soon loses her influence over her husband who nervously and foolishly locks upon all evening absence as an assault on domesticity. How are the great enterprises of reform, and art, and literature, and beneficence, and public weal to be carried on if every man is to have his world bounded on one side by his front door step and on the other side by his back window, knowing nothing higher than his own attic or lower than his own cellar? That wife who becomes leafous of her husband's attention to art or literature or religion or charity is breaking her own scepter of conjugal power. I know an instance where a wife thought that her husband was giving too many nights to Christian service, to charitable service, to prayer meetings, and to religious convocation. She systematically decoyed him away until now he attends no religious convocation. She systematically decoyed him away until now he attends no church, waits upon no charitable institution, and is on a rapid way to destruction, his morals gone, his money gone, and I fear his soul gone. Let any Christian wife rejoice when her husband consecrates evenings to the service of humanity and of God, or charity or art or anything elevation.

gone, his money gone, and I fear his soul gone. Let any Christian wife rejoice when her husband consecrates evenlings to the service of humanity and of God, or charity or art or anything elevating.

But let no man sacrifice home life to secret society life, as many do. I can point out to you a great many names of men who are guilty of this sacrilege. They are as genial as angels at the society rooms, and as ugly as sin at home. They are generous on all subjects of wine suppers, yachts, and fast horses, but they are stingy about the wives' dresses and the children's shoes. That man has made that which might be a healthful influence, a naurper of his affections, and he has married it, and he is guilty of moral bigsamy. Under this process, the wife, whatever her features, becomes uninteresting and homely. He becomes critical of her, does not like the dress, does not like the way she arranges her bair, is amazed that he ever was so unromantic as to offer her hand aud heart. There are secret societies where membership always involves domestic shipwreck. Tell me that a man has loined a certain kind, and tell me nothing more about him for ten years and I will write his history if he be still alive. The man is a wine guzzler, his wife broken-hearted or prematurely old, his fortune gone or reduced, and his home a mere name in a directory. Here are six secular nights in the week. 'What shall I do with them?' says the father and the husband. "I will give four of these nights to the improvement and entertainment of my family, either at home or in good neighborhood, I will devote one to my lodge."

I congratulate you. Here is a man who says: "Out of the aix secular nights of the week I will devote five to lodges and clubs and associations and one to the home, which night I will spend in secular nights of the week I will devote five to lodges and clubs and associations and one to the home, which night is will enter the offer the said of the relation of the first and the condition of the ribrate of the feelings of the family, the chisel, and I will cut an honest epitaph;

"Here lies the victim of dissipating associations."

Another test by which you can find whether your secret society is right or wrong is the effect it has on your secular occupation. I can understand how, through such an institution, a man can reach commercial success. I know some men have formed their best business relations through such a channel. If the secret society has advantaged you in an homeable cailing it is a good one. But has your credit failed? Are bargain makers more anxious how they trust you with a bale of goods? Have the men whose names were down in the commercial agency A I, before they entered the society, been going down since in commercial standing? Then look out. You and tevery day know of commercial establishments goint to min through the social excesses of one or two members, their fortures beaten to death with ball players, bat or cut amidships with the front prow of the regata, or going down under the swift books of the fast horses, or drowned in the large potations of coging or Monougahele. That secret society was the Loch Earn. Their business was the Ville de Havre. They stuck, and the Ville de Havre went under. The third test by which you may know whether the society to which you belong is good or bad is this; What is its effect on vour sense of moral and religious obligation? Now, if I should ske the names of all the people in this audience this morning and put them on a roll, and then I should lay that roll and call it from A to Z there would not one of you answer. I say that any society that makes me forget that fact is a bad society. When I go to Chicago I am sometimes perplexed at Buffalo, as I suppose many travelers are, as to whether it is better to take the Lake Shore route or the Michigan Central, equally expeditious and equally sate, getting to their destination at the same time. But suppose that I hear that on one route the track is torn up, the bridges are down and the switches are unlocked, it will not take me a great while to decide which road to take. Now, here are two roads in the future—the Christian and the unchristian, the safe and the unsafe. Any institution or any association that confuses my ideas in regard to that fact is a bad institution and a bad association. I had prayers before I joined that society; did I have them afterward? I attended the house of God before I connected myself with that union; do I absent myself from religious initiaences? Which would you rather have in your hand when you come to due—a pack of cards or a Bible? Which would you rather have in your hand when you come to due—a pack of cards or a Bible? Which would you rather have in your hand when you come to die—a pack of cards or a Bible? Which would you rather have pressed to your lips in the closing moment—the cup of Belshazzarean wassall or the chalice of Caristian communion? Who would you rather have for your palibearcra—the ciders of a Christian church or the companions whose conversation was full of slang and innuendo? Who would you rather have for your eternal companions—those men who spend their evenings betting, gambling, swearing, carousing, and telling vile stories, or your little child, that bright girl whom the Lord took? Oh, you would not have been away so much nights, would you, if you had known she was going away so soon? Dear me, your house has never been the same place since. Your wife has never been the same place since, Your wife has never will get over it. How long the evenings are with no one to put to bed, and no one to whom to tell the beautiful Bible stories?

What a pity it is that you cannot spend mo reevenings at home in trying to help her bear that sorrow. You can never break away from the little arms that used to be flung around your neck when she used to say, "Papa, do stay with me to-night. Do stay with me to-night. You will never be able to wipe aw ay from your lips the dying kiss of your little girl. The fascination of a bad secret society is so great that sometimes a man has turned his back on his home when his child was dying of scarlet fever. He went away, flefore he got back at midnight the eyes had been closed, the undertaker had done his work, and the wife, worn out with three weeks' watching, lay unconscious in the next room. Then the returned father comes upstairs, and he sees the cradle gone and the windows up, and says, "What is the matter." On the judgment day he will find out what was the matter.

Oh man astray, God help you. I am going take an arread of the hour of the first advent in your house, a thread of the part thread of heapuring, a thread of the power has a which them together until they make a very stout rope. I will take all these threads to when he had been
